What is “AJI” ?

Aji is a common sight on Japanese dinner tables, and along with saba, is the most common fish in Japanese seafood cuisine. How good aji fry tastes all depends on the quality of the aji!

Aji (Japanese jack mackerel) form shoals in coastal regions from Kyushu to Hokkaido and inhabit areas throughout Japan at depths ranging from less than 2m in harbors to 150m at sea. Aji are in season almost year-round somewhere in Japan as their spawning seasons differ by region. However, aji are caught in large numbers from late March to August as this is when their fat stores are at their highest.

Incidentally, aji is written “鰯” in kanji. This is a combination of the radicals “魚 (sakana),” meaning fish, and “参 (san),” which refers to March in the old Japanese calendar (May in the Gregorian calendar). One theory is that “参” was given to aji because this is when it comes into season. On the other hand, the neo-Confucian scholar Hakuseki Arai said that “Aji gets its name comes from its good taste” (“Aji” also means taste in Japanese). Or is it the case that because “aji” tastes so good Japanese people have enjoyed it since the Jomon period, and we give up! “参った! (maitta)” or surrender! “降参! (kōsan)” to its wonderful taste?

Aji “鰯” | Actinopterygii, perciformes, carangidae

Classification: English name | Japanese jack mackerel

Main nutrients | Vitamin B, vitamin D, calcium, DHA, EPA, protein, potassium, taurine

In any case, putting the excellent taste of aji aside, what really should be known about aji is the high nutritional value hidden within its modest frame. Even compared to other blue-backed fish such as iwashi (sardine) and saba (mackerel) which are also effective against preventing lifestyle-related diseases, aji’s protein content is one of the highest of all fish, at over 20%.

What is “Aji Fry TEISHOKU” ?

A teishoku (set meal) is a typical Japanese style of dining, with rice, soup, pickles, and a side dish all on one tray. Teishoku are an excellent part of Japanese food culture that provide a healthy nutritional balance along with aesthetics that allow you to enjoy dining with all five senses and they even make washing up easier.

◎Tartar sauce

No aji fry teishoku is complete without tartar sauce!

Some people like Worcestershire or soy sauce, but tartar sauce is the traditional way to enjoy aji fry. A rich sauce with onions, pickled cucumber, and boiled egg chopped finely into a mayonnaise base.

◎Aji fry

The “leading role,” occupying center stage

The star of the teishoku, accompanied by cabbage or parsley. A squeeze of lemon brings out the flavor. Aji comes in various shapes depending on the restaurant, such as cut open or filleted.

◎Kobachi (small bowl)

The “key supporting role” essential to teishoku

Side dishes such as pickles and boiled food play key supporting roles. Intriguingly, using food of various colors such as green, red, and yellow guarantees an excellent nutritional balance.

定食

[Aji Fry Teishoku]

Compared to tonkatsu (pork cutlet) and hamburger steak, where the taste explodes with the first bite, aji fry brings a feeling of happiness as its flavors slowly unfold in your mouth. Your heart will flutter when you hear that aji fry is on the menu tonight. That's the true potential of aji fry.

Note: Photos shown are for illustrative purposes only.

◎Rice

Rice, the mainstay of the teishoku

Since ancient times 2000 years ago, Japanese people have developed a food culture centered on rice. It is a given that the main dish of the teishoku will go well with rice.

◎Soup

The heart of Japanese people, miso soup!

Miso soup is so versatile that it moisturizes the throat during meals and increases the efficiency of digestion and absorption. The universal favorite miso soup represents the spirit of Japanese people and healthy food that is the pride of Japan.

This is a true aji fry teishoku!

What is the “HOME OF AJI FRY” ?

April 27, 2019: On this day, Mayor Yoshiyasu Tomoda announced the Matsuura Aji Fry Charter and officially declared Matsuura City the Home of Aji Fry.

Matsuura City that has long boasted Japan’s largest catch of aji, is now also emphatically declaring the exceptional taste of Matsuura Aji. The Matsuura Aji Fry impressed the Tokyo foodies and harsh critics of the media to the extent that they said, “this changes the concept of the aji fry.” With assured confidence in the Matsuura Aji Fry, Mayor Tomoda stated, “In fact, it is not only the aji catch that Matsuura City can boast as the best in Japan. Aji can be found all over Japan, but most aji inhabit the Sea of Japan, particularly the Tsushima Current (from Tsushima through to the East China Sea). Here, there are around 420,000 tons of aji compared to the 40,000 tons of the Pacific Ocean side of Japan, a difference of over ten times. The closest market to this fishing ground is the Matsuura Fish Market. Even experts agree that “The Matsuura coast is the most habitable sea for aji, so how can the aji here not be delicious? Also, Matsuura is the only place in Japan with a monthly aji catch of over 1,000 tons throughout the year! So you can enjoy fresh aji no matter when you visit.” There is good reason why Matsuura calls itself the Home of Aji Fry.

Everyone puts on a serious expression as the auction starts. In front of the unloaded fish, the price is decided between 50 to 60 buyers in an auction method unique to fish markets.

Aji taste their best from spring to summer, but the figures show that Matsuura—the closest fish market to the fishing grounds—that fresh aji is available all year round.

Daring to fry aji so fresh it could be served as sashimi. This ocean bounty is thick, crispy, soft, and juicy.

— Matsuura Aji Fry Charter —

- We love the Matsuura Aji Fry
- We will use aji landed in Matsuura City or aji caught in the waters around Matsuura City
- We will serve aji that has not been frozen or has been frozen only once
- We will serve Matsuura Aji Fry with the spirit of omenashi (hospitality)
- We will strive to serve freshly-fried aji fry while it is hot
- We will thoroughly pursue the deliciousness of the Matsuura Aji Fry
- We will widely propagate the deliciousness of the Matsuura Aji Fry
- We will pray for world peace through the promotion of the Matsuura Aji Fry

Mayor of Matsuura,
Yoshiyasu Tomoda

The aji fry has been a part of daily life in Matsuura for such a long time that the owners of long-established restaurants say, “In bygone days Matsuura children would even eat aji fry as a snack.” Here lies another reason why the “Home of Aji Fry” is fitting for Matsuura. The flag logo and Aji Fry T-shirts are also symbols of the Home of Aji Fry.
