[UNESCO World Heritage] Sites of Japan's Meiji Industrial Revolution and Nagasaki's Industrial Heritage

During the latter half of the 19th century, in a period spanning only 50 years, Japan achieved modernization by adopting western technology and utilizing it in ship building, steel and iron manufacture, and coal mining. Japan was the first country outside of the West to achieve this. There are 23 sites over 8 prefectures in Kyushu and Yamaguchi which testify to this achievement. Eight of these component sites are within Nagasaki City.

[UNESCO World Heritage] Hidden Christian Sites in the Nagasaki Region

Christianity came to Nagasaki in the mid-16th century, however it was banned by the Tokugawa Shogunate in the 17th century. Even after all Christian missionaries were expelled from Japan, adherents in the Nagasaki and Amakusa regions continued to practice Christianity in secret for over two centuries by acting like they were practicing Shinto or Buddhism. This is considered a remarkable phenomenon in the history of world religions. The 12 sites that illustrate this history comprise the "Hidden Christian Sites in the Nagasaki Region" World Heritage designation, inscribed in July 2018. Three of the 12 component sites are located in Nagasaki City.
